NYC buskers decry treatment by cops

Brooklyn. A rally was held for a busker whose arrest was caught on video and went viral.

Sounds of protest songs and beatboxing filled the Metropolitan Avenue G subway station Tuesday as subway performers rallied against the recent arrest of Andrew Kalleen.

Kalleen, 30, was playing in the station on Saturday when an officer told him he could not perform without a permit, and to leave the station. Kalleen, who was playing an acoustic guitar, told the officer he had a right to perform under the MTA Rules of Conduct which permits "artistic performances, including the acceptance of donations" as long as the performer does not "impede transit activities."

The police officer forcibly removed the guitar from around Kalleen's neck, and told him to leave. Kalleen was cuffed by officers and ejected from the station. A bystander shot a video of the incident, which has been seen 575,000 times on YouTube.

The rally was organized by BuskNY, an advocacy group for subway performers, and attended by performers, as well as representatives from the Street Vendor project and two New York City council members.

Kalleen was more soft-spoken at the gathering than when he asserted his rights on Saturday.

"We were lucky that something was captured on tape," Killeen said.

BuskNY called upon the NYPD to train officers on interacting with subway performers.

"If this is 'broken windows,' then I want no part of it," said Councilman Stephen Levin.

Kalleen, who was arrested on charges of loitering, has a court date set for Friday. Matthew Christian of BuskNY said he believes the charges will be thrown out, as the arrest of many buskers before him have.

Darcey Leonard, 39, who has produced performance art shows for the past 18 years, said the subway is "one of the best stages for artists to develop."

James Cohen, an associate law professor at Fordham Law School, said that the video shows the cop "being rude and confrontational."

Cohen said generally, people have a right to perform in stations as long as they are not disorderly.

"[Police Commissioner Bill] Bratton is old school … and I don't have any doubt in his perspective he sees street entertainers in the subway system as being disruptive," Cohen said.

Visit Metro.us to read more about busking arrests in the NYC subways.

Legal music

MTA Rules of Conduct Section 1050.6 allows subway performances as long as they don't impede transit.

- Buskers have been ticketed much more in the past year.

MTA funding gap could cost riders

A report released Tuesday by New York State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli found the MTA is in "better financial condition," but warned a funding gap could end up costing transit riders in the long run.

There is a $15 billion gap in the MTA's five-year capital program, DiNapoli said.

"Additional borrowing could increase pressure on fare and tolls, and while the MTA should look for opportunities for savings, deep cuts could affect the future reliability of the transit system and jeopardize expansion projects," DiNapoli said.

DiNapoli's report found for every billion dollars borrowed, riders could feel a 1 percent increase in fares if the funding gap is not filled.

The report also found that 1.7 billion people rode the subway in 2013, and 81.8 million people rode the Metro North. METRO

The report also found the MTA's debt is expected to reach $39 billion by 2018.

Farina fires 15 school leaders

Schools Chancellor Carmen Farina fired 15 school superintendents on Tuesday. Another 27 superintendents kept their positions in the shakeup.

"I want leaders at the helm who understand what it takes to ensure a supportive school community," Farina said.

The shift has reportedly been in the works since July, when all 42 of the city's superintendents were asked to reapply for their positions. Since then, a rehiring process has been underway, with eight districts immediately getting new superintendents.

"Change is crucial — and it has to be change moving in the right direction," added Farina.

Newly hired superintendents met with Farina on Tuesday. METRO

Manhattan. Hoax bomb found outside Jay-Z club in Midtown

40/40 Club / GETTY IMAGES

Jay-Z's 40/40 Club faced a scare Tuesday morning when a suspicious item was left outside the hip-hop icon's popular Midtown establishment.

Police were alerted to the scene at 3 a.m. where they discovered a device "consisting of a black pipe attached to two pieces of wood with white cord" and a flashing red LED light in a phone booth at the corner of 25th Street and 5th Avenue,

A video that was released show a man placing the package there before heading southbound on Broadway.

The NYPD's Bomb Squad surveyed the device and gave an all-clear.

Police are currently investigating the case. METRO

Glasslands music venue shutting down

After eight years on Williamsburg's waterfront, music venue Glasslands announced on Tuesday that it is shuttering its doors come New Year's Day 2015.

The latest Brooklyn space to meet its end after nearby DIY venue Death By Audio announced its upcoming closure and 285 Kent shutting down in January, Glasslands hosted concerts for many of the city's burgeoning acts, including MGMT, Yeasayer, Das Racist and Ratking.

"We're proud to have grown up in this place and time," reads a public statement from the music venue.

As for the two months of remaining scheduled shows, Glasslands' owners "intend for them to be our best ever," and will likely close things out with a New Year's Eve bash.

"Goodbye for now, not forever," the statement signs off, winking to a possible new life for the storied venue. METRO

Manhattan. Attorney General warns people about Ebola scams

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman issued a consumer alert on Tuesday warning New Yorkers about Ebola-related schemes.

Schneiderman said companies have been trying to sell "bogus Ebola preparedness kits" that claim to cure the virus, for which there is not an FDA-approved drug. Fundraising schemes are common as public fears rise, according to the attorney general's office.

New Yorkers should beware of fundraising solicitations and offers of goods and services related to Ebola," Schneiderman said. "Scammers are shamefully exploiting this moment of heightened concern about public health to defraud good people. These frauds detract from the positive work of the brave medical professionals fighting this disease and the charitable spirit of New Yorkers looking to help out."

The attorney general's office recommends only donating to well-established charities, using caution when opening unsolicited email and reporting potential scams to the attorney general's charities bureau at charities.bureau@ag.ny.gov or 212-416-8402.

The Better Business Bureau has also warned of Ebola scams, including a fundraising site set up for a Dallas nurse that was not authorized by her family.

The site has since been pulled down.

Using tragedy

The attorney general said that people are using the Ebola scare to pull scams on those who are seeking to donate money or people frightened of the virus.

- He said to only donate to well-respected charities and to report anything that feels like a scam.

NYC. New apps aim to save pedestrian lives

A smartphone app that alerts pedestrians when they cross into an intersection and one that alerts drivers when they start to fall asleep were named the winners Tuesday of an NYU and AT&T competition, the purpose of which is to find ways to cut down on traffic deaths in the city.

Tug uses Bluetooth technology to send notifications to distracted pedestrians who are using their smartphones and about to cross an intersection without the right of way.

The other winner, Anti-Sleep Alarm, prevents car drivers from falling asleep at the wheel.

The app asks the driver how tired he or she is at the beginning of the trip and uses facial recognition to monitor whether the driver's eyes are open or shut during the drive.

"New York City's Vision Zero initiative means that we need to use every tool in our arsenal to drive down traffic-related fatalities and injuries," said Kim Wiley-Schwartz, assistant commissioner for education, Department of Transportation. METRO

Further development

Tug and Anti-Sleep Alarm were two of eight contest winners to receive cash prizes to develop their apps.

- Teams from 45 states and 13 countries competed.
- Winning entries could either be an app or wearable device.

Man stabbed to death at Linden Houses

A 21-year-old man was found stabbed to death on Tuesday morning at the Linden Houses, 185 Wortman Ave., the NYPD said.

Police responded to a 911 call at 1:10 a.m. and discovered Jason Philips unconscious with a stab wound in his torso in a 10th floor hallway.

Philips lived on the same floor of the building.

EMS responded to the scene and the victim was transported to Brookdale Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival. METRO

JUST RELEASED:
United States Baseball Legal Tender Coin

Cooperstown, N.Y.

The National Baseball Hall of Fame and the U.S. Mint have just released the FIRST EVER curved American coin. This legal tender half dollar has been struck to honor the 75th anniversary of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum.

First Ever Curved American Coin

The coin's curved design is a first in American history. The outward curving 'tails' side of the coin depicts a baseball—complete with intricate stitching. The inward curving 'heads' side of the half dollar reveals a classic leather baseball glove, with the curve perfectly reflecting the natural shape of a weathered and well-loved baseball mitt. Among the celebrity judges who selected this FIRST EVER curved design were Hall of Famers Joe Morgan, Brooks Robinson, Ozzie Smith, Don Sutton, and Dave Winfield. The curved design is like nothing you have ever seen before. You won't believe it when you hold it!

Going...Going...GONE

Public demand for these coins has exploded and a number of versions have already sold out quickly. The 2014 Baseball Hall of Fame Half Dollar will forever go down in history as a runaway best seller. But even though the coins are disappearing at record speed, you don't have to strike out.

If you CALL NOW, you can lock in your very own piece of baseball history—not to mention the most unusual American coin ever struck!

Pristine Brilliant Uncirculated Half Dollar

Each 2014 Baseball Hall of Fame Commemorative Half Dollar is minted in Brilliant Uncirculated condition and comes in official U.S. Mint packaging, including the official Mint Certificate of Authenticity. Best of all, you can secure yours today for only $29.95 (plus s/h). Due to overwhelming demand, orders are limited to a maximum of 5 coins. No dealer orders will be accepted. Lock in yours now. Hurry! A sellout is expected at any time.

US to funnel travelers from Ebola-hit region through five airports

Washington. Lawmakers welcomed the move; others said more needed to be done.

Travelers to the United States from Ebola-stricken Liberia, Sierra Leone or Guinea must fly into one of five airports that have enhanced screening in place for the virus, the U.S. government said on Tuesday.

The restrictions on passengers whose trips originated in those three West African countries were announced by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security and were set to go into effect on Wednesday. The measures stop well short of the travel ban sought by some U.S. lawmakers in a bid to prevent further Ebola cases in the United States.

Affected travelers will have their temperatures checked for signs of a fever that may indicate Ebola infection, among other protocols, at New York's John F. Kennedy, New Jersey's Newark, Washington Dulles, Atlanta and Chicago's O'Hare international airports, officials said.

These airports account for 94 percent of passengers coming to the United States from the Ebola-hit countries. REUTERS

Poll

Ebola among top US worries but well behind economy, jobs

A new poll on Tuesday showed Ebola ranks well behind the economy, jobs and other issues among America's top problems, while a law enforcement official warned about Ebola-related scams promising protection against the virus that has killed thousands in West Africa.

Ebola debuted in the Top 10 concerns of Americans but remained far behind five other issues: the economy, dissatisfaction with government, jobs, health care and immigration, the Gallup polling organization said.

The poll was conducted Oct. 12-15, before Monday's announcement that 51 people had been removed from Ebola watch lists in Texas after showing no signs of symptoms for 21 days. REUTERS

Death. Oscar de la Renta remembered for his elegant designs and generosity

Oscar de la Renta, the legendary fashion designer who dressed first ladies and Hollywood stars during a career that spanned five decades, was remembered on Tuesday for his exquisite style, generous heart and tireless philanthropy. The designer died Monday at the age of 82, after a battle with cancer.

Tributes poured in for the tall, Dominican-born designer who died late on Monday at 82, surrounded by family at his Connecticut home after a battle with cancer.

"He died exactly as he wished: with tremendous grace, great dignity and very much on his own terms," his family said on his website. "We are working on arrangements to celebrate his life."

Known for his classic, feminine creations, de la Renta dressed first ladies, Republican and Democratic, including Jacqueline Kennedy, Betty Ford, Nancy Reagan, Laura Bush and Hillary Clinton, who wore a plum-colored de la Renta gown to her daughter's wedding in 2010.

"His singular talent and exquisite taste elevated American fashion, and his warmth and friendship will be missed by our family and all whose lives he touched in his extraordinary journey," Bill and Hillary Clinton said in a statement. REUTERS

Quoted

"His designs reflected his extraordinary personality — optimistic, fun, sunny, romantic."

Anna Wintour, editor-in-chief of Vogue, said on the magazine's website

White House confirms US citizen released from N. Korea

The White House said on Tuesday that detained American tourist Jeffrey Fowle had been released from North Korea and was on his way home to be with his family.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest said the United States welcomed the move but pressed North Korea to release two other U.S. citizens as well.

"While this is a positive decision ... we remain focused on the continued detention of Kenneth Bae and Matthew Miller and again call on the DPRK to immediately release them," Earnest said, referring to North Korea. The United States will continue to work actively on those cases, he said. REUTERS

Good on ya, Linds! / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Lindsay Lohan almost up to 'Speed'

Hey, here's some positive Lindsay Lohan news, for a change! After a rocky start to her West End stage debut in David Mamet's "Speed-the-Plow," Lohan is said to be settling into the job and actually doing pretty well. I know! Crazy, right?

"A bunch of her friends went to see the show and, despite what you hear, she gave a really solid performance. She did not get handed her lines and was really funny. The audience had a great reaction to her," a source tells Radar Online. And hey, faint praise is still praise, right?

"She is in a really good place right now and we are all really proud of her. It seems like the old Lindsay is back," the source insists. I'm assuming that's supposed to be a good thing. Like, the old-old, Lindsay, and not the Lindsay of the past seven years.

Joan Rivers' barbs run deep after death

Joan Rivers left some instructions that her executors are finding a little tough to follow through on. "Joan requested that after she is gone that her personal diaries be turned into a book," a source tells Radar Online. "The problem is that they are having a real hard time shopping it around because of how over-the-top and defamatory it is." Sounds about right for Rivers.

So how bad is this burn book of hers? I mean, how defamatory are we really talking here? "Joan bashes celebrities and politicians in firsthand accounts throughout her life. Among her biggest revelations is that President Barack Obama is gay." Oh, I see.

Jennifer Garner speaks out against Hollywood sexism

Jennifer Garner was honored at Elle magazine's Women in Hollywood benefit earlier this week, and she used the name of the event as a jumping off point for a pretty awesome speech about sexism in Hollywood. Here it is:

"The fact that there even needs to be a Women in Hollywood event is a little bit sad. I mean, the Men in Hollywood event is every day — it's called Hollywood. Fifty-one percent of the population should not have to schedule a special event to celebrate the fact that in an art that tells the story of what it means to be human and alive, we get to play a part.

"So for example, my husband and I do kind of the same job, a little bit. Not long ago we both had one of those magical days, we call it a junket, where we both attended these lovely events where people come in every four minutes, they ask the same questions over and over again, you know the drill. We got home at night and we compared notes. And I told him every single person who interviewed me, I mean every single one asked me, 'How do you balance work and family?' and he said the only thing that people asked him repeatedly was about the tits on the 'Blurred Lines' girl, which, for the record if we're talking about them, they are real and they are fabulous. … As for work-life balance, he said no one asked him about it that day. As a matter of fact, no one had ever asked him about it. And we do share he same family. Isn't it time to kind of change that conversation?"

All valid points, and cleverly made. I'm all for asking Affleck about how he juggles it all the next time I interview him. But does that mean I have to ask Garner about Emily Ratajkowski's rack, too?

Bieber scolded by the Vatican

After a year of very grown-up trouble, it's nice to see Justin Bieber getting back to the kind of juvenile shenanigans that made him such a lovable scamp to begin with. Pop's reigning tiny tyrant took a trip to the Vatican recently, where he was scolded by staff during a tour for kicking a soccer ball around the halls. Oh, that Bieber. Always up to something! Justin, you know you're not supposed to play ball inside the house of the Lord.

Get sweet, not spooky, pumpkin desserts

If you haven't had enough of pumpkin mania, keep reading. After enjoying a delicious fall meal (maybe a pumpkin pasta from last week's column), indulge in a pumpkin dessert.

Magnolia Bakery

Five locations. Magnolia is in full pumpkin mode, with pumpkin cupcakes frosted with maple cream cheese, pumpkin brownie bars with a layer of chocolate and mini pumpkin cheesecakes. Don't worry, they also serve pumpkin pies, which are great for holiday dinners, and pumpkin whoopie pies. Start your day with a cup of coffee and a pumpkin muffin. Cupcakes start at $3.50.

Doughnut Plant

Two locations. This place has raised the game for all doughnut makers, combining traditional flavors with unconventional stuffings and toppings. They've been at it for 100 years, creating the first square doughnut and filled creme brulee doughnut (sinfully good). Stop by now for the pumpkin or apple cinnamon doughnuts and cakes. The Plant promotes a special flavor every day that sells out quickly. There is always a line, but it's worth the wait — $3.25 never tasted so good.

Francois Payard

Three locations. The macaron king has gone seasonal. The pumpkin variety is extremely light and flaky, yet full of flavor. Buy a dozen for the perfect hostess gift ($30). There's also a Jack O'Lantern cake ($39) made with pumpkin pound cake and pumpkin creme brulee, and an array of chocolates (try the key lime) and truffles (praline is another favorite). This chocolate is top-notch.

CMJ programmer: 'Music is the most important thing'

Live shows. What does it take to be among the 1,300 acts performing in NYC this week?

King Gizzard and the Lizard Wizard / PROVIDED

Roughly 1,300 acts will perform throughout the city as part of the CMJ Music Marathon. While this number may seem daunting, it's not even the half of it.

"It's about a 25 percent acceptance rate," says Matt McDonald, who programs artist showcases at CMJ.

"Music is the most important thing, obviously," says McDonald, "but we look at what kind of press they have, what kind of tour history they have, online profiles, what kind of team they have in place. If we commit to inviting them and if they commit to making the trip, whether that's across a bridge or across an ocean — the last thing we want for anybody is to play to an empty room — then we're really looking for bands who are at a point where playing CMJ can really benefit them."

Some of CMJ's biggest success stories — Arcade Fire, Lady Gaga, Avicii, Mumford and Sons — all played small rooms in previous years and broke out to bigger success because of the CMJ exposure.

McDonald, who's in his 10th year with CMJ, says one of the biggest differences with this year's marathon is that attendees don't have to do too much extensive research to figure out who they want to see.

"It's the first year we've really had a top-notch app," he says. "With almost every band, you can just click on the link and with a festival like this, you have 1,300 acts and most people only know some of them, so just being able to hear it right then, right there can make a huge difference in terms of being spontaneous."

The approximate number of musical acts who applied to perform at the CMJ Music Marathon this year, according to Matt McDonald. Only 1,300 are chosen.

Expert opinion

Who to see at CMJ

Who is Matt McDonald looking forward to seeing this year?

King Gizzard and the Lizard Wizard. "Have you seen them? They are awesome live! They're a great rock band. There's either three or four guitars."

Moses Sumney. "I haven't had the chance to see him live yet. He's from L.A. and he has a really impressive voice. It's a little bit on the new R&B side."

Spookyland / PROVIDED

Spookyland. "Spookyland are from Australia. The guy has a pretty interesting voice. I saw them live a couple months ago, and they were kind of all over the place in terms of influences, so that's one I would definitely like to check out again."

Joey Bada$$. "Joey Bada$$ is an up-and-coming hip-hop act. He's been around for a couple years now. He played two years ago when he was very, very new still. So this is kind of like his return."

And during the daytime. "Zola Jesus is doing a Q&A, Mac and Laura from Merge are doing a 'looking back on the Merge label' sort of thing and Tom Scharpling is going to do a Q&A. It will be interesting to see what he's been up to since 'The Best Show.'"

Michael Keaton gets his wings

Interview. The actor finally gets his comeback in the meta backstage comedy "Birdman."

Michael Keaton doesn't mince words when asked, point blank, what it's like to have a career resurgence in "Birdman." "It feels good," he remarks. It should feel at least weird; in the film — made as a single (albeit fake) shot by "Babel" and "Biutiful" director Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu — the former "Batman" star plays Riggan Thomson, the former star of a winged superhero franchise. Keaton's character is staging a comeback with an out-of-control Broadway take on Raymond Carver; in real life, Keaton is staging a comeback with a tightly controlled piece of cinematic chaos.

"Birdman" has already earned Keaton raves, though he says he was already feeling good about himself. When Inarritu, at a presser for the film's New York Film Festival closing night appearance, talks about how he tends to feel good about what he's doing before turning to self-doubt, Keaton replies that he feels the same way. "The difference," he adds, "is 20 minutes later I think, 'No, you're actually more than that, Michael.'"

Still, the production was atypically demanding, with Keaton having to stay "on" as Inarritu and cinematographer Emmanuel Lubezki — an old pro at long takes, with "Children of Men" and "Gravity" under his belt — kept cameras rolling.

"When you watch them work together, you have to come up to that [level]," Keaton says. "Otherwise you're a punk. You're just dead weight."

Michael Keaton retreats to the bar in "Birdman." / FOX SEARCHLIGHT

The wrong winged avenger

Sorry, superhero nerds

Keaton and Norton attended the New York Comic Con for "Birdman," even as they laughed about how what they're promoting is decidedly not a comic book movie — though viewers who don't do their research may buy a ticket to "Birdman" thinking it is one. Keaton remembers seeing "The Dead," director John Huston's 1987 swan song. A couple of young horror fans showed up and were unhappy to discover it was a lyrical and chatty adaptation of a short story by James Joyce. "You could tell they totally thought it was a horror movie," he recalls. "You could hear mumbling in the back. ... At about minute 14, they were like, 'F— this.'"

Rentals are on a roll

Survey. Rent.com tells us what we need to know before signing a new lease.

Renting? You aren't alone. Nicole Schreck, senior brand manager at Rent.com, says there are a couple of reasons more and more people are choosing to rent. The first revolves around recent college graduates. "Young people coming out of college are strapped with crippling debt, which makes it harder for them to purchase homes than it was four generations ago," says Schreck.

Another reason is that some simply enjoy the flexibility that comes with renting. "You can move more easily if you want to for a job opportunity," she says.

People are also drawn to rentals because of building amenities such as pools, tennis courts or home theaters — which many couldn't afford in a home. And of course there's the pleasure of not being burdened with raking leaves in the fall, lifting heavy shovels packed with snow in the winter or keeping up the grass in summertime.

From mortgage to lease

"Surveying property managers showed that there was a 50 percent increase in former homeowners seeking rentals [over] last year." Schreck

Staying put

What's trending?

Nearly 30 percent of property managers had more renters renew leases or request longer leases.

"I see this as a trend emerging because it is becoming so difficult to find rentals, so landlords are making it harder for you to secure an apartment," Schreck says.

"Most people would rather just lock down the apartment they are already in and not bother with the hassle of finding a new apartment."

More people are choosing to rent these days. / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Apartment hunting

Looking to move? Follow these tips from Nicole Schreck to ensure a smoother process.

Investigate

"The best tip is to do your research. This means knowing the average rental rates in your area," she says.

Be prepared

"The best way to handle a really tough rental market is to have everything a landlord could possibly request with you," says Schreck. So bring your credit report, your paycheck stubs and a copy of your rental insurance and be ready to sign a lease on the spot."

Gold Coast rentals heat up in New Jersey

Real estate. There are nearly 9,000 residential units slated to hit along the Jersey waterfront.

New Jersey's Gold Coast, the stretch of waterfront running along the Hudson River opposite Manhattan, is in the midst of a building boom, with dozens of developments (mostly rentals) in the pipeline.

As prices in Manhattan and the outer boroughs climb, Gold Coast towns with strong transit links are increasingly shedding their second-fiddle status.

"This side of the river used to be considered more of a niche market," said David Barry of Hoboken-based Ironstate Development. "It's now considered much more a piece of the fabric of greater New York."

Over the course of the next few years, the towns along the Gold Coast — which include Jersey City, Hoboken, Weehawken, West New York and Edgewater — are expected to add just shy of 9,000 new apartments, riding a wave of demand that has been growing since 2010. RICH BOCKMANN

TheRealDeal.com is a daily blog and monthly magazine covering real estate in the New York metro area.
THE REAL DEAL

The overview

Concerns

But there are some concerns about the large amount of residential product coming to the market. To wit, the vacancy rate is expected to tick up to 5.4 percent in 2017.

Still, others are confident there will be enough demand to absorb the new units.

"People like to say you can overbuild," said HFF's Jose Cruz. "The reality is, they will come for those units."

Cruz added that if any of the Gold Coast markets have the potential to overbuild, it is Jersey City. But even there, he said, any rental glut would be a short-term "blip."

Driving demand

Most of the recent development has been, and will continue to be, centered in Jersey City, where trendy shops are popping up and an industry-friendly mayor is using tax incentives to encourage developers to build there.

Recently completed residential projects include the LeFrak Organization's 158-unit rental tower Laguna that's part of Newport, the 600-acre, mixed-use city-within-a-city that the company has been developing for nearly 30 years.

Other buildings that have come online in the last year in Jersey City include Fields Development's 131-unit Madox Apartments and the Manhattan Building Company's 155-unit Cast Iron Lofts, which the developer has dubbed Soho West.

Ironstate & Kushner are building the 670-unit 235 Grand in Jersey City. / THEREALDEAL

Rising rents

The Numbers

Last year, the vacancy rate for multi-family rentals in Hudson County, which covers many of the Gold Coast cities, was 4.7 percent, according to the research firm Reis.

That was level with 2012, but a 13 percent drop from 2011.

Residential rents have been rising, too.

In 2013, the average effective rent in Hudson County was $2,650, up 1.7 percent from the previous year, Reis' data show.

By comparison, average rents in Manhattan climbed 2.1 percent for an annual price of $3,875 in 2013, according to appraisal firm Miller Samuel.

In addition, demand in Hudson County is expected to grow steadily, with rents projected to increase more than 1.6 percent annually over the next five years, according to the commercial firm HFF.

‘We’ll have digital twins in five years’

The future. A more high-tech version of the movie “Her” might be a reality sooner than you would think.

A few years from now, we will have a “digital twin,” a virtual facsimile of ourselves that will serve as our digital personal secretary — at least according to futurist and technology theorist John Smart. We asked Smart, the founder of the Acceleration Studies Foundation, to give us a glimpse into our cybernetic future.

According to your vision, we will have digital twins a few years from now. What does that mean, exactly?
A personal software agent, or digital twin, is an informational simulation of your values, interests, goals and, eventually, even your personality. It is a software system that has a crude model of you, in order to better serve you. You could call it a “butler” or “secretary” or “agent” — just like a butler has a good mental simulation of who you are and what you care about, so will your software agent, which is why we can call it a “digital twin.”

Can we compare them with the virtual characters in the movie “Her”?
The female personal operating system in “Her” would be a good example. But just like professional people often prefer to use their real names on social networks, while kids and casual users often use avatar names, I expect many professional people will prefer to use an avatar that is a rough model of themselves, rather than one that takes another form. For example, if you use your personal software agent to screen your calls or do simple emails for you when you are busy or asleep, some people will prefer their agent to look and act like them in these interactions. Others will prefer it to look like someone else.

What are the benefits of having a computer-based version of us?
The “natural language understanding” technology behind these conversational software platforms can be used to scan your emails and listen in on what you are saying. That allows them to make a semantics and values map of the words and things you care about.

Tell us about privacy. Can someone steal my digital twin and take all the info about me and, say, my banking details?
We don’t always think about building good privacy, transparency and security systems until a crisis occurs. Then we have to play catch-up and build better systems. The challenge is to make these subjects as important as innovation and growth to our technologists, politicians and the public. We are often too busy creating the next thing to think as carefully as we should about these subjects.

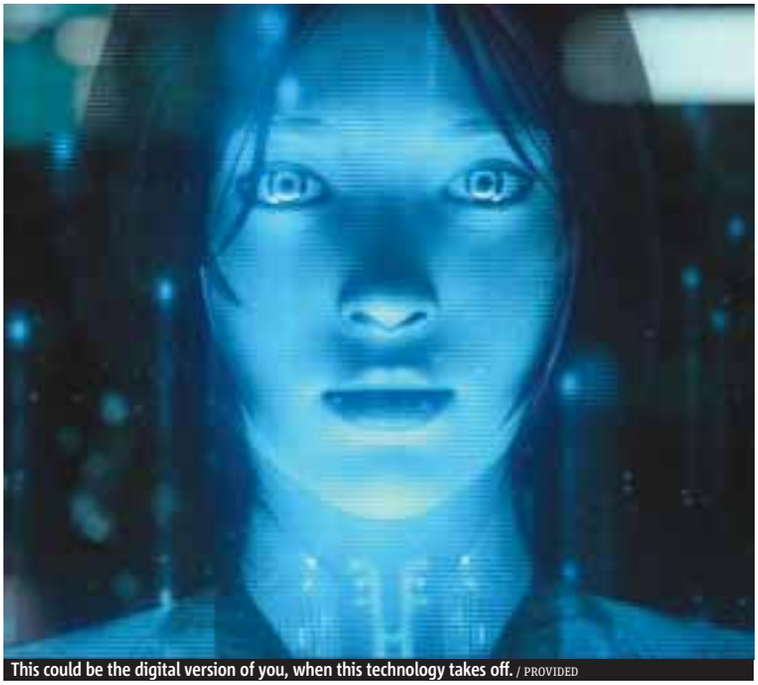
Bleak talk

The machines take over

Aren’t you afraid that one day our digital avatars will replace us?
If our digital systems are increasingly good copies of us, then it isn’t really “them” replacing “us,” is it? Rather, it is another version of “you.” Humans have been learning how to put the best of ourselves into our technologies since the dawn of humanity.



This could be the digital version of you, when this technology takes off. / PROVIDED

Put down that nail file!

Personal grooming. Too much trimming can change the shape – and health – of your nails.

When it comes to your nails, too much maintenance can be as harmful as chewing them. / MOODBOARD

Clean and well-groomed hands are essential to a polished look, but trimming nails too frequently or into the wrong shape could actually lead to serious health conditions, according to a new study.

"It is remarkable what some people are willing to do to make their nails look good, and it is in this context that I decided to look at what we really know about nails," explains lead researcher Dr. Cyril Rauch at the University of Nottingham.

Turns out, that wasn't much. Rauch's evaluation of scientific journals turned up little on the physics or math when applied to nails. For their study, Rauch's team came up with an equation to identify the physical laws of nail growth to find the causes of some of the most common nail-related problems, such as ingrown toenails, spoon-shaped nails and pincer nails.

"We demonstrate that the shapes of the free edge of a nail – the way we cut nails to give them a specific fashionable shape – can have repercussions on the future shapes of the nail over time," as well as bring out underlying medical conditions, he says.

The scientists discovered that when the balance between growth stress (nails growing too quickly or slowly) and adhesive stress (the number of structures supporting the nail) is broken, it can affect the entire nail, causing it to change shape over time.

This situation happens much more often for larger and flatter nails like the big toe, which is most susceptible to problems. Age or change in metabolic activity, such as puberty or pregnancy, are the usual causes of nail stress, but the equations showed that it can be amplified by poor trimming.

"We suggest that nail beauty fanatics who trim their nails on a daily basis opt for straight or parabolic edges," Rauch says.

Feet Hurt? Bunions? Hammertoes? Heel Pain?

Platelet Rich Plasma Therapy (PRP)
A new approach for treating Tendon Injuries for the Achilles, Tendonitis and Plantar Fasciitis (Heel and Arch Pain)

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight– they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when Istep out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly – sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

More than you can chew

Food cravings – and not just the pickles-and-ice-cream pregnancy kind – show how little control we feel sometimes when it comes to food. We rounded up three new studies that looked at some factors that could be warping our eating habits. EVA KIS

Dip in blood sugar

Craving pizza or planning a snack binge? A University of Washington study of identical twins raised together (to eliminate genetic and environmental differences in food habits) found that our brain's response to the sight of food appears to be driven by how low our blood sugar level is at the moment. Twenty-one twin pairs ate from a buffet, then their brains were scanned while looking at images of food. For the twin who made less satisfying food choices (as measured by blood glucose), the images provoked a stronger mental response.

Make a grocery list and stick to it to avoid the temptation of high-calorie foods. / DIGITAL VISION

High-calorie food bias

Everyone knows you shouldn't shop hungry; not only will you buy more food, but you'll buy food with higher caloric density. A new study found that while we're generally bad at estimating the calories even in foods we like, in a simulated auction study participants were willing to bid higher amounts on the higher-calorie foods — suggesting that the brain has an internal calorie counter that prizes such items. "Earlier studies found that children and adults tend to choose high-calorie food," according to study author Alain Dagher, a neurologist at the Montreal Neurological Institute. "The easy availability and low cost of high-calorie food has been blamed for the rise in obesity. Their consumption is largely governed by the anticipated effects of these foods."

Perception of value

Want a meal to taste better? Pay more for it, researchers at the Cornell Food and Brand Lab found. In the study, 139 diners at an Italian all-you-can-eat buffet were charged either $4 or $8. They then rated the taste of the pizza and how much they enjoyed the dining experience. "People set their expectation of taste partially based on the price – and it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy," says Dr. David Just. "If I didn't pay much, it can't be that good. Moreover, each slice is worse than the last – people really ended up regretting choosing the buffet when it was cheap." Diners who paid the higher price rated the pizza as being 11 percent tastier. In both situations diners ate an average of three slices of pizza. The lesson? "Go to the most expensive buffet you can afford. You'll eat the same amount but enjoy the experience and the food more!" says co-author Dr. Brian Wansink.

Sykes must be kidding

Re: '3 things I learned on a reality show' (Metro, Oct. 21) I see what's happening: It's a clear-cut case of being trolled! "My 154-foot yacht," "I only made $70,000," "The Internet on my 154-foot yacht was spotty." That's the only explanation for such a myopic, out-of-touch world view. If a real person wrote this, they would have to be a monster, right?

JOSEPH OWEN, VIA EMAIL

Mr. Sykes, need you be reminded your column is titled "Trade Like a Millionaire," not boast and complain like one, as seems to be the route more beaten with you? Us lowly 9-5 train riders, which make up over 50 percent of your readership, had our blue collars soaked with tears to hear of your disastrous reality TV ego-shot boat ride. (Yes, you made it clear it was a 154-foot yacht.) There are times of moral light in your articles, such as advice on investing in companies that take steps to better mankind, and we greatly appreciate this aspect of your knowledge and look forward to more along the same lines. I — there is that magic word — understand there are three I's in millionaire, but let's try to keep it under par per article, and keep that salt-water-saturated ego in check.

Jets sign Kerley to extension

The Jets are making all kinds of moves in their wide receiver corps. The team announced Tuesday they've locked up slot receiver Jeremy Kerley to a new four-year extension. ESPN reports the deal is worth $16 million, but just $5.4 million is guaranteed. The Jets signed wideout Eric Decker in the offseason and traded for receiver Percy Harvin last week.

IDZIK SHOULD JUDGE RYAN ON NEW ROSTER

The addition of Percy Harvin not only adds an elite playmaker to the Jets, it also gives head coach Rex Ryan a shot at reclaiming the season. And it is these final nine games of the regular season that Ryan should be judged on in light of this trade.

General manager John Idzik's move for Harvin acknowledges his team was devoid of talent on the offensive side of the ball. A quick scan of the statistics for the season shows a mundane offense ranked No. 20 in the league, with the NFL's second-worst passing offense. But statistics aren't necessary. Anyone who's seen a handful of minutes in a Jets game this season has seem an offense stuck in neutral.

Trading for Harvin is Idzik admitting he didn't do enough this offseason to bring in weapons for the offense. In doing so, Ryan's 1-6 start should be wiped clean. At year's end, Idzik can't determine if Ryan is worthy of an extension based off this start. That's like putting a blindfold on a student driver and failing him for veering off the road.

Problems remain with this Jets team. The secondary — in particular cornerback — remains an outstanding issue. But Ryan now has a fighting chance to right the ship and finish this year on a high note.

It was always going to be an uphill climb for this Jets team. Last year's 8-8 record wasn't sustainable. That team won too many games on last-minute heroics. Factor in a tough slate of games to start this season, with four dates against playoff teams from last year, and the dreams of a postseason berth were always meant to be dashed.

But with Harvin, the Jets could be built into a playoff team down the road if they can utilize his ability in space and if quarterback Geno Smith can deliver him the ball down the field.

These final nine games present a far more balanced schedule. They easily could have had another win or two with Harvin on the roster since Week 1. If they can utilize Harvin the right way, he will mask a lot of deficiencies.

Win some games, and Ryan should earn a shot at one more season with the Jets.

NFL power rankings | by Matt Burke

No. 1

Broncos (5-1)

Peyton Manning is Mr. September, Mr. October, Mr. November and Mr. December, but we need to see him come through in the clutch in January and February before we definitively call him the G.O.A.T. Remember, in the postseason he actually won a Lombardi Trophy, his touchdown to interception ratio was 3:7.

No. 2

Eagles (5-1)

The Eagles sneak into the No. 2 slot even though they were idle this weekend because of Arizona's struggles against Oakland.

No. 3

Cowboys (6-1)

Owner Jerry Jones said Tony Romo may have played the best game of his career against the Giants on Sunday.

No. 4

Cardinals (5-1)

No good-to-great team plows through a season without struggling, so we'll give the Cardinals a pass this week.

No. 5

Colts (5-2)

It's like Colts fans have a horseshoe up their bums. They get 14 years of Peyton Manning and now they have Andrew Luck.

No. 6

Ravens (5-2)

The Ravens are much like the Cowboys in that we're not entirely sold on them just yet due to a soft schedule.

No. 7

Packers (5-2)

The "Keep Calm and Carry On" Packers have won four straight and Aaron Rodgers is playing like the MVP we predicted.

No. 8

Chargers (5-2)

Philip Rivers looked like Philip Rivers from, say, 2013 or 2012 against the Chiefs. Not surprisingly, the Chargers lost.

No. 9

Seahawks (3-3)

Seattle is finding out what it's like to be on the receiving end of everyone's best punch. Seattle hasn't played well since its bye.

No. 10

Patriots (5-2)

New England is about to face Jay Cutler, Peyton Manning, Andrew Luck, Matthew Stafford, Aaron Rodgers and Philip Rivers.

No. 11

Lions (5-2)

No Calvin Johnson, no problem. They now turn their focus to a game in London against the Falcons.

No. 12

49ers (4-3)

The bye week comes at the perfect time for this exhausted group. But they're through the worst part of their schedule.
